Negotiations Last Months.

Negotiations have been in progress for months, unofficially seeking to re- fire without matches lease the vast quantity of merchandise consigned to American importers and already either paid for or contracted for under agreements which make the American buyers liable for payment. June 15 the British government refused to receive further unofficial repfor under agreements which make the American buyers liable for payment. June 15 the British government refused to receive further unofficial representations through the trade advisers. Since then the pressure on the State Department has been heavy, American importers asserting that, without notice of the order in council, and without no order the order in council, and without no order that the order of the order is consequently to protect and without an opportunity to protect themselves, they had contracted for themselves, they had contracted for these goods, in some cases had already paid for them, and in all cases were liable for the purchase money.

ONCE A FAMOUS CITY

Caucasus Battlefields.

Tomorrow will be a big day on the Strong Fortress in Heyday, But Was Many Times Overrun by Armed Forces.

> "Ant is a remarkable ruined Armenia" city in the heart of the Causasus battlefields," begins a statement just issued by the National Geographic So-"Its thick, crumbling walls and the ragged foundations of its ancient buildings, mayhap, have served, since the outbreak of the great war, as defenses for the Russian or Turkish sol-diers. Its desolate, decaying outlines type the Caucacus, the country that has well and fairly earned the name of the land of fire and sword.' Ani is the Armenian Pompeii.

"The ruins lie in a rolling, parched "The ruins lie in a rolling, parched upland country, almost deserted. They are near the Alexandropol-Erivan railway, a little more than thirty miles south of Alexandropol, and some thirty-five miles from the Russo-Ottoman boundary. There is a steep hill to the south and east of the storied capital of the old Armenian kingdom, and through a tortuous gorge beside the dead city flows the Arpa Chai, a weird, bright-green river. This is the site of the last great city of a free Armenian people.

Once Splendid Capital.

Once Splendid Capital.

"Ani was once a famous, splendid apital, the 'city with the 1,001 churches,' hose influence extended throughout the Caucasus and as far as England, in the west. All that remain of its population are an aged Armenian monk lation are an aged Armenian monk, the director of excavations and the pleasant host to stray antiquarians and other tourists to places out of the way, and a few Armenian peasants. Before the war this population lived in peaceful isolation among the memorials of their nation's former greatness.

"A visitors' book was kept by the monk and its early entries reach back many years. The home of the mork, headquarters and guesthouse of the dead city, was a one-storied, stone structure near the cathedral. It contained one large bare and rather dirty structure near the cathedral. It con-tained one large bare and rather dirty room devoted to the accommodation of occasional guests. Its four beds con-stituted it a bedroom; its benches made it into a dining room.

Was a Strong Fortress.

"The ancient capital was built upon a promontory out by the Arpa Chai and a small tributary stream. Across the third side its founders had cut-a ditch, making their city floor a raised platform, which gave it great adplatform, which gave it great advantages for defense in the days before cannon could hurl their destruction from the neighboring heights. Aniwas a strong fortress in its heyday, and its powerful walls, with their many towers, are still standing, strung around the plain. The walls have largely decayed, however, through the centuries in which the city has lain quiet and unpeopled.

centuries in which the city has lain quiet and unpeopled.

"Back of the walls, in uneven, incoherent distribution, lie the remains of churches, palaces and public places without number, some just the heavy groundwork, suggesting the old-time structure, while other buildings survive in high, ragged masonry. The cathedral stands unbroken, a solitary, weather-torn edifice, a red and brown growth out of the red and brown plain.

growth out of the red and brown plain.

"The history of the later years of the Armenian kingdom is bound up in the history of Ani. The stronghold eity became the capital of the Bagratid kings of Armenia in 961. The Byzantium emperor captured it in 1946, and it was then a hive of many scores of thousands, a wealthy city and an inviting one. The Seljuk Turks carried fire and sword throughout its confines eighteen years later; the warlike Georgians took it five times between 1125 and 1209; the Mongols overran it in 1239 and an earthquake in 1219 completed the work of ruin. The great cathedral, the most perfect survival, was founded in 1010, just at the beginning of the city's long chain of misfortunes."
